The Winseburgh Philatelic Research Library at The University of Texas at Dallas has been chosen as the national headquarters and home for literature of the Confederate Stamp Alliance.

The Confederate Stamp Alliance, whose distinguished membership study and research Confederate Postal History, has honored The University of Texas at Dallas Philatelic Library by the placement of its library research material with them.

The Confederate Stamp Alliance was born in 1935 to foster the study of Confederate philately. Only one hardbound book and only one magazine series dealt with Confederate philately in 1935.

The Winseburgh Philatelic Research Library will house the top literature in the world on Confederate philately.

September 30, 1982, is the day on which the Winseburgh Philatelic Research Library will accept the Confederate Stamp Alliance as a part of their library.

THEREFORE, I, as Governor of Texas, do hereby designate September 30, 1982, as in Texas.

CONFEDERATE STAMP DAY

In official recognition whereof, I hereby affix my signature this day of , 1982.

Governor of Texas
